or nearly the last four years, Lloyd Center PRC has been blessed by the lovely Gay Garfield. She volunteers Tuesday afternoons as a peer-counselor, but serves the ministry in countless other ways. Gay has a distinctive gift in evangelizing, and her willingness to share herself in this way is evident in her conversations with clients. She recounts that her God-given gift has lead her to be creative in igniting many spiritual conversations as she meets with clients. We celebrate with her upon recognizing how successful she has been in leading women to the Lord. After all, sharing the love of the Lord should be amid our highest priorities.

Gay was inspired to get involved with PRC after attending Bible study at her church. As she heard other volunteers share stories of the ministry, she was intrigued as they spoke of the broken themes woven in many of our client 's lives. God placed it on her heart to get involved with this ministry that worked to rescue the unborn. She heard His calling, and she responded. Though Gay is naturally gifted in sharing the Good News, she recognizes that serving at PRC has indeed stretched her in other areas. She admonishes that volunteering has impacted her dependence on the Holy Spirit. "It has given me a greater compassion and understanding of the women in these situations," she explains. Gay credits some of what she has learned here about counseling in motivating her to go out and earn a counseling certificate in Biblical counseling. We rejoice in the unique qualities God has blessed us with in calling Gay to serve at PRC.
